LOCAL NEWS.

Subject at the Lyceum this evening "Offer unto God Thanksgiving," Psalm, 50:14.

Messrs. Laine & Co. expect the bark Kidder, from Portland for Hong-kong, daily.

An order went forward by the Zealandia for a magnificent organ from London for the Kaumakapili Church.

The sky was cloudless in this morning's early hours, and the stars seemed brighter than usual after the succession of inky nights.

Last night there was only one light on King street, and that stuck on the side of a house, from the Anchor Saloon to the bridge.

As a day or two of fine weather will be required to dry the grounds, the athletic sports will not take place till Friday or Saturday.

It is estimated that six hundred persons sat down at once to the luau. The luau looked beautiful with its decorations outside and inside.

The Custom House closed at 1:30 yesterday afternoon without notice, causing complaint from merchants who could not get entries of landing goods.

Reports of wells from which water had to be pumped before the recent earthquake, but which now run continuously, are coming in from Florida.

Pacific Hose Company was at the fire on Sunday night, almost as soon as the Volunteer Boys, but were inadvertently omitted in our mention of the brigade.

Mr. Thos. Spence, Mr. Horace Crabbe, Mr. Robert French, Mr. Peter Jones, Mr. William McLean and others were the first to give the alarm for the fire on Sunday evening.

Mr. M. McNerny is going to put up a fine building on the corner of Fort and Merchant streets, covering the space now occupied by his stores, Mr. Johnson's wine store and the Press Publishing Company. Mr. E. B. Thomas has secured the contract, work to begin in March.

There was a large crowd on the Oceanic wharf at noon yesterday, to take leave of the many passengers by the Zealandia for San Francisco. The King drove Hon. Geo. W. Macfarlane to the steamer in his private carriage. Music was furnished as usual by the Royal Hawaiian Band.

The S. S. Australia, November 21st, took from the Honolulu Post Office a mail of 5,921 letters and 1,376 parcels of papers, and the S. S. Zealandia, November 23rd, 2,554 letters and 1,005 parcels of papers. Total mail despatched to the Coast this week, 8,475 letters and 2,381 papers.

Mr. Edward Macfie and Miss Ritson, daughter of Mr. John Ritson, of the Finance Department, were married yesterday afternoon at St. Andrew's Cathedral, by Rev. Alex. Mackintosh. Miss Grace Robertson was bridesmaid and Dr. Campbell best man. The bridal party left for Kilauea, Kauai, by the steamer Iwalei.

The billiard match at McCarthy's hall, Fort street, last evening, between Wm. Howe and James Saunders resulted in victory for the latter by ten points. It was 150 points up and a pretty close game all through. Several times there was a tie, notably at 75 or half-way through, at 97 and at 119. The highest run was made by the loser and it was 12.

Mr. William Miller, cabinet maker, slipped while going from his house to his barn, at Seaview, yesterday morning, and severely wrenched his spinal column. Dr. Gray attended him and found him suffering much pain in the head and back, so that he could neither sit nor stand with comfort, but had to keep moving about. With care, however, he is likely to come round again.

Union Thanksgiving Service.

There will be a union Thanksgiving Service of the Bethel Union and Fort-street congregations held in Fort-street Church Thursday morning at 11 o'clock. Rev. S. E. Bishop will preach the sermon, and will be assisted in the service by Pastors Cruzan and Ogge. A general invitation is extended.

Police Court.

Lohi, J. D. Taylor and Erickson each forfeited $6 bail for drunkenness. Keawe and Kiekie pleaded not guilty to affray, but Officer Keaka said that the previous afternoon they were at Cape Horn drunk and fighting. Fined $6 each. Ah Quai was fined $50 for having hard labor for 20 days, for having opium in possession. Several cases of deserting contract service were settled amicably.

SUICIDE.

A Chinese Patient in the Queen's Hospital Hangs Himself—Death of Another when Wanted at the Inquest.

Yesterday morning about six o'clock a Chinese patient in the Queen's Hospital, named Dun Tai, was found dead, hanging to his bedstead. He had been brought to the hospital about ten days ago, by a Chinaman named Yung Tan, who paid a month in advance for him. The patient was suffering from a mild attack of continued fever. On Sunday last he was so far recovered as to be changed from low diet, and Monday his diet was further increased. The last two nights he was slightly delirious but, as Mr. Eckardt said at the inquest, this is common in such cases after the fever has subsided. All the known particulars of his tragic death are given in a synopsis of the inquest below.

Mr. David Dayton, deputy marshal and coroner, on being notified of the death, summoned the following jury to hold an inquest at the hospital: Robert S. Scrimgeour, Daniel Logan, Ho Fon, Chen Sing, Lan Chuck and N. G. Gang. The body was viewed as it lay in a building on the hospital grounds, and was seen to have a pronounced mark of the cord about the neck.

Dr. Brodie, the first witness, described the case and pronounced the cause of death to have been strangulation; he considered the patient between 35 and 40 years of age, and regarded him as convalescent when he saw him last on Monday.

Mr. J. F. Eckardt, purveyor of the hospital, was notified of the occurrence immediately after its discovery, and found the body still warm although the face was cold and the heart still. The discovery was made by Hanakumoo, a native attendant, who with the watchman had the body lowered when witness reached the ward. Deceased was a little delirious the last two nights, but had not been for several nights before. It is very common, after fever has subsided, for a patient to be delirious at night.

Peter Peters, the watchman, had visited the patient on his hourly rounds among the wards during the night, and nearly midnight found him up in bed complaining of pain in the chest. About 11 o'clock deceased was talking to another Chinaman in the room, and after the latter went to sleep was quiet. When witness last saw him he was very restless, but on being told he had better go to sleep became quiet. As he heard no sound from him between four and five o'clock, he did not go in, as he thought he had gone to sleep. On coming down stairs, about six o'clock, after calling Mr. Eckardt's assistant as usual, witness met the native attendant, who asked him if he knew the Chinaman had hung himself. Hanakumoo, one of the hospital stewards, told of his discovery of the hanging. He was going round, as usual at six in the morning, removing the mosquito netting for patients not able to do so themselves. Going to the bed of the deceased he lifted the mosquito bar, and finding deceased apparently standing up, went to lay him down, but found him held up by the cord about his neck fastened to the bedstead. The cord produced was a thong used by Dun Tai to tie up his clothes on an adjacent bed, where he could reach it from his own bed, but any way he was well enough to get up and procure it. They asked the other Chinaman about the case, but he did not know anything about it.

This concluded the testimony. The Coroner at this stage crossed the hall from the dispensary to the ward where the tragedy occurred, to ascertain whether the other Chinaman could throw any additional light on the case. In a few minutes he returned and reported to the jury that the other Chinaman had died within the hour since they had visited the ward. When the jury were being shown Dun Tai's bedstead and how the body was found, the other Chinaman was sitting on the side of his bed and replied to questions put by the Chinese jurymen. His name was York Seu, he came to the hospital last Sunday and was registered as 31 years of age. The cause of his death was the opium habit, his face bearing strong testimony to that fact. His death was not unexpected; but it was not regarded as so near, and happening in the connection it did was a strange coincidence with the inquest.

The jury returned a verdict that Dun Tai came to his death from strangulation produced by his own hand while delirious from fever.

THE LUAU.

The luau, or ahaaina, or feast in ancient style, on the Palace grounds yesterday is supposed to have come off, because the weather was fine and Mr. Hart was complaining the evening before that he got too short notice for supplying ice cream. Further corroborative evidence that the luau was held is in the following sentence from yesterday's Advertiser, "Forty hogs have been killed, also several hundred chickens, and there will be an abundance of all kinds of fish, poi and other Hawaiian dishes." The HERALD would have been only too glad to send a representative to note what must have been an interesting scene, and give an accurate report without the sneers and misrepresentations, such as others bestowed on the creditable efforts of the natives in former parts of the Jubilee programme. This paper has, however, for some reason or reasons not given, been debarred from the privileges accorded the rest of the local press in the festivities. Application was made personally in the interest of our readers, for admission to the remaining events on the programme, but a promise that has not been kept was the only result.

Nocturnal Jubilations.

A great crowd was present within the Palace enclosure from six o'clock last night until the morning hours. There were singing and hula dancing going on at different places simultaneously, the principal hula troupe performing in front of the main entrance, under a ruby electric light. All round in concentric semicircles sat and stood natives of all shades, degrees, ages and sexes, diversified with military, police, and Royal School boys, in their various uniforms, and sprinkled with pale faces. Seven electric lights were running under reduced power, turning night almost into day. The mele singing to the monotonous rattle of the calabash drums made music as weird as the whole scene. A pair of hula dancers, male and female, in the lanai drew off a large portion of the throng from the immediate front of the Palace.

Women and Weddings.

No woman ever lived but felt a flutter of genuine interest in anticipation of a wedding, especially if the adventurous twain consists of two of the popular young leaders of society. There are so many things in a wedding. The fact of the two young favorites making up their minds to live together is of itself sufficient to excite much interest. No doubt many maidens fancy the victim at the altar forever foregoes all possibility of future flirtations, and others who have done too much of that thing rather envy the happy-looking bride partly concealed within the misty veil of tulle. But the chief thing upon which the feminine mind is concentrated is the bridal trousseau. Tell a lady of a wedding and forget that, and you have simply tortured her.

A Lesson in Table Manners.

It was at a country Sunday-school picnic, where great quantities of the regulation eatables, chiefly apple pies, had been brought for the children to eat. Little Mary Jane, from away back in the hills, was there, and with her mother, who kept an eye on the child constantly to see that her behavior was perfect.

Presently Mary Jane was observed digging into an apple pie with her knife; whereupon her mother spoke up:

"Mary Jane Beais!"
"What, ma'am?"
"What be you a doin'?"
"Eatin' pie, ma'am."
"What be you a eatin' it with?"
"Knife!"
"So you bet! Now what have I told you about eatin' pie with your knife, Mary Jane? Take that pie up in your hand and eat it as you'd ought to!"

A Woman's Diary.

Young ladies sometimes keep diaries, and one of them, a Miss Livingston of Jersey City, kept one to some purpose, for it will probably enable her to win a lawsuit brought for breach of promise of marriage. She brought a pretty little vellum and gold volume into court, in which the following entry was found:

"On the night of October 1, 1884, which was a bright moonlight night, the defendant and I took a walk in Mount Morris Park. We came back to my mother's house. My mother was away at the time, being at Tom's River, N. J. We went into the parlor and I sat down at the piano and began to play 'Climbing up the Golden Stairs.' The defendant remarked: 'It's a beautiful night.' I admitted that it was. He then took my arm and led me to a rocking-chair."

The present subject of gossip in Paris is Mme. Eudoxie Hedouin. She is a patient at the Salpetriere Hospital, and the physicians are puzzled over her. She is subject to what is known in medical parlance as "sleeping spells," and she has just waked up after enjoying an eighteen days' sleep. This is not the first "nap" she has taken, as during last January and February she slept fifty days. The doctors cannot say whether it is a case of sleep or trance.

The Queen of Portugal wears the Paris life-saver's medal. In 1874 she was bathing with her two sons, Charles and Alphonse, aged 11 and 9 years, at the watering place of Cascare. A big wave carried off the two children, and the Queen boldly swam out to their relief. The sea was running high, and the lady and her boys were nearly lost in the surf, when the lighthouse keeper, seeing their danger, dashed into the water and succeeded in bringing all three to shore in safety.

"As a true tonic, effective invigorator and genuine appetizer, Duffy's Malt Whisky is unexcelled."
